to join Christine as she shares what she's learnt about creating and maintaining a strong professional network, and what opportunities networking can unlock.

ABOUT THE SPEAKER:

Christine Cuénod completed her Bachelor of Arts with Honours in 2012 at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, majoring in Media and Cultural Studies, as well as English and French at undergraduate level. Passionate about language, education and communication, she has applied her strengths and skills to developing networks to strengthen and promote her alma mater and its graduates, research and community work.

Since 2013, she has worked at UKZN as the networking facilitator for the Friends of UKZN Agriculture alumni association, linking agricultural science academics with their alumni and stakeholders. She is also the current primary journalist for the College of Agriculture, Engineering and Science at the University, reporting on scientific research, events, awards and achievements.

The Friends of UKZN Agriculture association, established in 2012, has focused on maintaining and extending the strong reputation of agricultural education built over decades at UKZN through establishing a robust network of role-players who are invested in the success of agriculture at UKZN, and the graduates coming through these ranks.
